

No Aria

She sang into the reddest sun face a white and lettered mask

The wine glass behind her broke down to the sidewalk-gutter

How red between the pebbles, the petals of the less-red rhododendron her sandals stepped on

She sang into the reddest sun
face a white and lettered mask

Elizabeth Kate Switaj
poesis@gmail.com